

The Unspeakable Nothing Love

The love that cleaves Earth to her core and blesses the ant and the elephant the weed and the redwood the tiniest worm at the deepest hot vent in our unfathomable ocean and every parallel universe and unseen dimension of our incomprehensible omniverse

The love that cries in the wilderness murmurs in the sleeping village shouts in the choked chaos of our swollen cities dreams between the narrowing walls of our brutal, mercenary prisons

What thread shoots through this endless panorama?
What line connects the uncountable dots?
Where lives the hot consummation to unite us all?

Why everywhere and nowhere in the everything and nothing in supreme bliss and killing despair in the somnambulance of our quotidian day Crush the last seed joyously and let everything die so that the Unspeakable Nothing Love can live